Diary entry by Schenker November, 1921

12. XI. 21 –4°, bedeckt.

November 12, 1921 –4°, overcast.

National Holiday, 1 but still receive pupils. To Vrieslander [Otto Vrieslander] (postcard): have urged Hertzka [Emil Hertzka] [to deal with] the fragment. To Hertzka [Emil Hertzka] (postcard): in this sense. To Hindenburg [Paul von Hindenburg], 2 Ludendorff [Erich Ludendorff] letters and Tonwille [Der Tonwille (1921-24)]. After teatime a stroll in the Inner City; run into Jeral [Attersee] and walk part of the way with him. Finished "Secondary Literature" section for Mozart, 3 in the meantime Lie-Liechen [Jeanette Schenker] [has also finished] her little jacket.

Citation

Footnotes

1 On November 12, 1918 the ceremonial proclamation of the (First) Republic took place on the steps of the Austrian parliament. On April 25 1919, unanimously and without debate, the date of November 12 was declared the National Holiday. In 1933, the Austrian Parliament was abolished, the national holiday of November 12 also becoming a casualty of dictatorship, since it was officially rescinded on April 27, 1934.

2 = OC 24/17a and OC 24/17b; undated drafts.

3 "Mozart Sonate A-Moll (Köchel-Verzeichnis Nr. 310)," in: Der Tonwille [Der Tonwille (1921-24)] Heft 2 (1921), 7–24; Eng. transl., I, pp. 55–71; esp. 19–24 (pp. 66–71).